1. Boimandoho (Chinese phoneticization: Po-yen-man-tu), formerly chairman of the Eastern Inner Mongolian Autonomous Government and later the vice-chairman of the combined Eastern and Western Inner Mongolian Autonomous Movement Association, was relieved from his office when there was a reorganization of the Inner Mongolian governmental structure in March 1947 (See recent report on this reorganization). At present he is in Wangyehmaiao outwardly inactive in politics. The excuse Boimandoho gives for not having resumed his office is poor health, but actually YUN Tse and his followers incited the youths of Eastern Inner Mongolia to carry on a propaganda campaign against him, which forced him out of office. YUN Tse's group ousted Boimandoho because he is an ardent "racial principle" advocate and tried to institute moderate policies in place of the leftist policies recommended by the YUN Tse group. Because of his beliefs he would never cooperate whole-heartedly with the Chinese Communists, with whose program YUN Tse and his followers have geared their activities.
